Description: TECAN Infinite M200 is laboratory device and accessory for multiplex luminescence and fluorescence applications. Device features automated robotic arm for dispensing samples or reagents onto cuvettes or microplates, as well as range of high speed and throughput sample injection capabilities. Infinite M200 is integrated with TECAN's proven laser-based multi-channel detection technology, to measure multiple biological responses simultaneously. System features graphical user interface to configure instrument for single or multiple sample injection processes. Accommodates range of different cuvette and microplate vessels, suitable for both 1.5ml and 0.2ml tubes as well as plates up to 384 wells. Multichannel optical detector can detect up to four different signals in parallel, with wide range of detection wavelengths. Designed for high-throughput applications with sensitive fluorescence and luminescence. Features automated sample injection unit that enables hands-free operation of 96 or 1,536 up to eight-channel multipoint experiments, providing maximum flexibility. Comes with range of software, including intuitive data collection and analysis interface. Designed with automated calibration settings, providing reliable, accurate and reproducible results.
