Proper Citation: PLoS Blogs (RRID:SCR_001371)

Description: PLoS Blogs has been set up to bring a select group of independent science and medicine bloggers together with the editors and staff who run our blogs. Our independent network is made up of writers who love science and medicine, and scientists and physicians that love to write. Here, you'll find an equal mix of blogs from journalists and researchers tackling diverse issues in science and medicine. There are three very distinct types of blogs on the PLoS Blogs network: the official PLoS blog, the PLoS journal blogs (collectively known as The PLoS Blogs), and blogs from the independent network (a.k.a. The PLoS Blogosphere) # The official PLoS blog: This content is produced, edited, and/or maintained by PLoS staff. # The journal blogs: This content is produced, edited, and/or maintained by PLoS journal staff: The current journal blogs are Speaking of Medicine (PLoS Medicine's blog) and everyONE (PLoS ONE's blog). # Our independent network of bloggers (The PLoS Blogosphere): This content is produced, edited, and/or maintained by the authors. * All of the content in The PLoS Blogosphere came from the minds of the authors. PLoS does not screen, edit, or otherwise meddle with content on the these blogs in any way. Our bloggers and our users are held to exactly the same standards, and the community guidelines apply to everyone that uses our site. If a blogger has posted content that you believe violates our site abuse policy, please contact PLoS. * Bloggers monitor their own comment threads: All comments will be reviewed by the author of the blog where you leave your thoughts. Just follow our simple community guidelines and we'll all get along just fine.
